NELLIE BECKER'S FATE.

Men Arrested Charged with Causing Death of a Former Hornelisville Belle. FLMEA, Jan. 8.-Ten years ago Nellie Becker was one of the prettiest girls in Hornelisrille. She was then 10, an orphan of respectable parentage. She lived with an aunt in that She had always borne a good name and could have married well, but, flattered by the attention of one above her station, she fell, and was deserted by her betrayer. When her child was only a few months old it was taken by a respectable family, and is now a bright and handsome boy, ignorant of his true parentage. After parting with her child Neille Becker fell into questionable ways, and it was not long before she lost semblance to respectability. Some time ago she became an inmate of a notorious house in Wellsville, Allegany county. At the age of 20 she was still a remarkably handsome woman.

Among the woman's admirers was John

Sauter, Jr., a bartender at Lauterterne's saloon in Hornellsville. He occupies a room in what is know as "the Brewery," on Crosby street, that city. At 3 o'clock in the afternoon of Dec. 2 last Undertaker Curtiss was notified by Otis R. Chadbourne, and old and eccentric character of Hornellsville, to go to Sauter's room and take charge of the body of a dead man that was there. The undertaker went. and instead of a man found a dead woman. She was fully drossed. A large handkerchief, which passed under the chin, and was tied which passed under the chin, and was tied tightly on top of the head, concealed both sides of the woman's face. The body was removed to the Morgue. There it was recognized as that of Nellie heeker.

The intimacy that existed botween the dead woman and bauter was well known. It was generally telleved that she had died either from alcoholism or had committed suicide. An autopsy of the body was made be Dr. Dobson. A swellen discoloration was found on the right temple, which the handkerchief had hidden. The swelling was an inch high and two inches across. No trace of any poison was discovered.

hidden. The swelling was an inch high and two inches across. No trace of any poison was discovered.

The story Sauter told the Coroner was that he was awakened at half past if on the morning of Dec. I by a tapping at his bedroom window. He went to the window and found Nellie Becker there. She told him she had just come in on the Erie train from Wellsville, and was very ill. She begged him to let her stay in his room until morning, when she would go to her aunt's. He let her in. She carried one of her overshoes in her band, saying that the mud was so deep that it was pulled off as she came from the depot. Her dress was covered with mud. She complained of pain in her stomach and head. She did not go to bed. Sauter goes on duty at Lauterborne's salcon at half-past 5 o'clock in the morning, and is off at 4 in the afternoon. When he got home on the afternoon of Dec. I he found Nellie Becker still in his room, very ill. She continued getting worse, and at 10 o'clock at night she walked the floor in agony. At 11 o'clock the woman was in such a terrible state that Sauter says he thought she ought have help. His mother lives in the house where he rooms. There is a doctor not far away. Otis Chadbourne, Sauter's old chum, lodges on Hill street, a long distance away. Sautor did not call his mother, nor did he summen the doctor. He said the reason he did not call his mother was that he did not want her to know the woman was in his room. He went all the way to Hill street, he said, aroused old Chadbourne, and asked him to go back with him and see what he could do to aid the woman. They got to the Brewery at half past 12. Nellie Becker was dead.

Old Otis Chadbourne said that for months he bed hear recolarly corgand in waking Sauter deal.

Old Otis Chadbourne said that for months he had been regularly engaged in waking Sauter mornings in time for him to get to his work. On the morning of Dec. I when he went to sauter's room to call him he found Nellie Becker there in bed with her night clothes on. On Nov. 20, he said, he got a package out of the express office addressed to Nellie Becker, and left it for her at Sauter's room. This package contained clothing sent from Wells-rille by the woman in whose house she had been lying and some of the articles it conand left it for her at Sauter's room. This package contained clothing sent from Wellspille by the woman in whose house she had been living, and some of the articles it contained were on the Becker woman's dead body. The verdict of the Coronor's jury was not made public. Further investigation was made quietly. It was found that on the night and morning of Dec. 1, instead of the streets being so muddy that Neilie Becker could not keep her robber on, the ground was frozen hard. That the woman had been in Sauter's room since Nov. 26 was also established to the satisfaction of the detectives. It was learned that old Chadbourne was at Sauter's room on the night and early morning of Dec. 1. Some carpenters who were at work in the cellar of the Brewery on Dec. 2, directly under Sauter's room, heard sounds of a struggle in the room, and the noise continued for some time.

These investigations were kept secret. On Wednesday the verdict of the Coroner's jury was made public. The finding held both Sauter and Chadbourne responsible for Nellie Becker's death, and, the case having been quietly taken before the Grand Jury, an indomental was found against the two mon on the charge of manalaughter. Sauter was arrested and admitted to bail. Chadbourne, being sick abed, has not yet been taken into custody.

Suicide Mas Its Disadvantages, and Beter yesterday:

GESTLEMEN: "Better first than not at all." I have been advised to pursue a different course from the endinary that is multiplying the enormous tribe of S.C. cranks now on the rampage. Likewise, I have been informed I had no right to jump overboard; be-sides I anticipate to get either rescued or drawned, and, being in bad linck any way. I feel almost certain that in trying hanging the rope might tear, and to attempt shooting a pistol, revolver, or the like appear bdispensable. Poisoning will occasion the belly ache. In order to cause the least possible trouble, following set forth my tale of woe:

Coming from the Argentine Republic and having lost here my pay as a surveyor, I to ame seriously ill with annua in connection with a sort of numbress in my legs from the knees downward. I am by no means to suitable ciothes to face this sesson's weather, wind makes my case a rather more aggravating than funny one.

To cap the climat, through all these troubles and privations, my memory a giving our sowny hat surely, and it is not that sort of weakness, neither, which Mrs. Carler manifested at court recomb, but rather indicative of softuning of the brain. I am not destrous, by any means, of becoming a burden to the public, and this is not likely to happen, as I am awaiting the receipt of money (44.200) from a lexacy through the death of my mother in Padriary last; but for a supermity of red tape and such I cannot make the cash available, being without friends or acquaintances. To steal I am too staph, to beg too pread, and do years of age. I will say any roof during a shower might be convenient, and this is the short and sweet, or rather the sour of it, and having never yet come into condict with the respectable poince force anywhere. I place my want in Providence, through your commissioners.

The letter was filed.

The New Boston House is a 15-cent ledging house, Mueller was found abed hast evening in one of the box stalls looking out on noisy lark row. He is a pleasant looking old man, with a long gray heard. As he says in his letter, his legs below the knees are devold of feeling, but he is able to get about a few hours each day with the aid of a stick.

He said that his father was a well-to-do paper manufacturer and lived in Muellinaus. He died seventeen years ago, leaving a wife and eleven caidren. Albert Mueller, the writer of the letter, is the second son. He was educated at the University of Bonn, he says, as were several oghis brothers. He took up surveying after leaving the university and prospered fairly. Mue years ago newent to south America, and for a long while taught mathematics surveying, and languages at the University of Cordova, in the Argentine Republic. He came to this city three months ago and tound work, surveying, and languages at the University of Cordova, in the Argentine Republic. He came to this city three months ago and tound work, surveying in Worcester. Mass. Two weeks ago he became too iil to work and returned to this city.

Mueller wants the Commissioners to provide or him until he receives a legacy of 15.080 marks tover $4.000 from Germany. This was left to kim by his neither, he says want he will for him until he receives a legacy of 15,000 marks tover $4,000 from Germany. This was left to tim by his mother, he says, but he will have to wait some time for it. A friend advised him to write to the Commissioners, Another reason he gives for wanting to be provided for is that he believes his mind is failing.

Mutual Accusations to the Navy Yard. The trouble between Civil Engineer Asserson and Chief Clerk Joseph Schollum of the yards and docks department at the navy yard has recently formed the subject of a special has recently formed the subject of a special investigation by Commander Summer, Lieut, Calhoun, and Ensign Entier. The report of the Board of Investigation was presented resterday to Commandant Erlan and will be forwarded to Washington. The inquiry resulted from a war of words between Civil Engineer Asserson and the chief elerk, during which the latter was accused of incompetency, disobedince of orders, and neglect of duty, and Capt. Asserson was accused of the filegal employment of men in his bureau. The decision of Secretary Tracy in the matter is awaited with interest in the navy yard.

Got a Splinter in Her Fout on the Bridge. A suit has been begun against the cities of New York and Brooklyn by Miss Hannah Wherry of 154 Henry street, Brooklyn, for 5.000 damages for injuries received on the promonace about three months ago. She alleges that a spinner of wood in the flooring inbedded itself in her foot, and she has since been confined to her house.

NEW INTEREST IN THE COLE CASE Contention Over the Books of Binavelt & Co.-Judge Cole Brandishes a Het Poker.

NYACK, Jan. 8.—This has been an interesting day for those concerned in the Blauvelt-Cole matter, several new features having been developed since yesterday. It was found this morning that a room in the rear of the offices of James H. Blauvelt & Co. had been entered some time last evening and some books and papers taken therefrom. It was soon learned that Harry R. Blauvelt, lately acting as cashler in the establishment during the absence of Falward H. Cole, had forced the door of the room and taken a typewriting machine and some insurance papers. A reporter saw Mr. Blauvelt to-day and obtained from him the following statement:
"I went to the office last night to get some private papers, and found that the door through which I always entered when the office was locked was securely bolted on the inside, something which had never been done before. As I could not open it with my key, I forced it open and entered. This I did at the suggestion of a special agent of the Royal Insurance Company. None of the other doors was bolted, and it was evident that it was the purpose of whoever locked that door to keep me out. I contend that I had a perfect right to ferce the door open. I took away the registers of some of the companies and such other me sut. I contend that I had a perfect right to force the door open. I took away the registers of some of the companies and such other books and papers as will enable me to carry on the business. I have written to all the companies which we represent of my holding their registers. Otherwise we would be shut out diffithe business entirely, as Dickinson has got possession of the expiration book. After the meeting of the companies on Wednesday I did not come to the office until the next morning. I looked for the expiration book to hunt up a risk, but could not find it. I asked Dickinson where it was, and he replied: 'It is none of your business.' I then left the office and settled a loss in Grassy Point for Messrs. Farley & Barnes, which occurred on the night of Dec. 14. They notified Dickinson the next morning and several times thereafter, but he paid no attention to it whatever, and it would probably not have been adjusted had I not accidentally been in Grassy Point on Tuesday. I am acting under my father's orders, and am doing all I can to protect his interest in the business. All renewals for J. H. Blauvelt & Co. will be taken care of by me personally and placed in good, sound companies, through the agencies of Mr. A. M. Voornis. I cannot place these in our agency. I have notified several of the companies that I would do this, and they replied: All right."

A still more interesting incident occurred this afternoon in the Commercial building. The firm books, which were shipped to New York on Wednesday, came back this morning, and when the expressman took them up to the room of Blauveit & Co. a boy employed there told him to deliver them at the office of Judge Cole, in the same building. This he did, and only a few moments elapsed before Mrs. James H. Blauvelt, her son Harry, her attorney. A. S. Tompkins, and William Polhemus, a nephew, came hurriedly into the building in search of the books. The three men went at once to Judge Cole; in the same building. This he dod, and only a few moments elapsed before Mrs. J

SECOND-HAND ROW IN AN UPROAR. A Stranger Wanted $100 Worth of Carpets and Elekel Shouted "Polloe,"

A tall shabbily dressed man sauntered yesterday afternoon along the stretch of Seventh avenue from Twenty-fourth to Thirtieth streets, which is known as "Second-hand Row." because of the old clothes and old fur-niture establishments that flourish there. The shabby man stared at the conglomeration of goods heaped before the stores and stopped at length before a young Hebrew named Zickel, who stood in front of 346 Seventh avenue on the lookout for customers.

The shabby man told Zickel that he wanted to furnish two rooms in his flat. Zickel smiled sweetly, and in a jiffy led the stranger into the basement, where carpets and bedding were temptingly displayed.

Two minutes later Seventh avenue was in an uproar around Zickel's second-hand emporium of household goods. Zickel was bellowing for the police. A crowd of three hundred or more were massed in front of the store staring at the frightened Hebrew. Small boys were cheer-ing frantically at the prospect of somebody being arrested.
"He's a dangerous crank." cried Zickel, excitedly, as an Irish policeman ran up, and pointing to the shabby stranger. He de-manded a hundred tollars und grabbed me py der throat ven I told him dot I gouldn't gife id to him."

Mr. Shabby Stranger held up his hands in apparent astonishment.

"I wanted to buy a hundred dollars' worth of carpets," ho said, "and this duffer goes and yells for the police. I never heard of such a yells for the posters thing."

The stranger's words staggered both the cop and the crowd for a moment. The notion of anybody making a $100 purchase in Becond-hand Row was evidently a big strain on the couler mind.

"Have you $100 in your 'kick'?" inquired popular mind.

"Have you $100 in your 'kick'?" inquired the cop.

"Part of it," retorted the shabby stranger proudly, and he fished up a bright sliver dollar. "It's enough to bind the bargain," he added.

"You better put that in the bank before it gets lost, "advised the cop.

"Don't be alarmed, Mr. Officer," replied the stranger. "I've got plenty more where that came from. I will get $5,000 bail in five minutes if I'm to be arrested for asking for so much carpet. This merchant has got things mixed up badly, that's all. I asked for $100 worth of carpets, not $100 in cash."

At this juncture a Seventh avenue lawyer with a shiny beaver pushed his way through the erowd and tapped Merchant Zickel on the shoulder.

"Say Zickel," he said, with the authority of one learned in the law, "you nin't got no case against this man."

The butcher next door, who knows no law at all, promptly confirmed this opinion. Then up spoke the good-natured copper:

"This feller isn't a crank, I guess," he said, "so what's the use of making a complaint ag'in' him? You'll only have to waste time going to Jefferson Market, and the Judge wouldn't hold him, anyhow."

Then he turned to the stranger. "Come, trot away, frot away, 'n'e said, "and put that dollar in a safe somewhere."

"I vander if dot feller really vanted to spend so much money?" said Zickel to himself sadiy.

Dit. CLAUSNIZER ARRESTED.

DR. CLAUSNITZER ARRESTED.

His Whereabouts Revenled by a Case in a Hoboken Court.

William A. Wright, who was formerly in the florist business with J. F. Clausuitzer at Castle Point, was before Justice Seymour in Hoboken yesterday. He and Clausnitzer dissolved partne:ship on Nov. 30 last and the business fell into the hands of a stepdaughter of the latter, Miss Holen Adams. Miss Adams as-serts that all accounts owing to the firm were renounced by Wright when the agreement of sale was made; but that since then he had collected money. Wright denies that he made sected money. Wright denies that he made such an agreement, and says his arrest is a conspirincy on the part of Mrs. Clausnitzer and her husband. Justice Seymour paroled him in the custody of his attorney.

Clausnitzer was accused four years ago of practising medicine without a license and under an assumed name. Mrs. Clausnitzer was formerly fine wife of Dr. Adams, who had an office in lilicenter street, and who left a large practice when hedded. Clausnitzer, who had been a student in Germany, married Mrs. Adams and began to practise under the names of both Dr. Adams and Dr. Chusnitzer. Howse indicated in 1888, but he forfeited his ball, and has succeeded in keeping out of sight until this case cancup. Detective Peter Bricy went to Hoboken yest day with a bench warrant and arrested him at his home. 31d Washington street, and he will be held to await the arrival of requisition papers.

Deaf from Catarrh.

I was the victim of the worst case of Catarrh that I ever heard of. I was entirely deaf in one ear, and all the inside of my nose, including part of the bone, sloughed off. SPEARING EELS.

of Sport on the Hackensnek Ponds-Fieth Gorham Gets 165,

Spearing eels through the ice is a favorite astime on the ponds on the meadows adjoining the Hackensack River. The cold of the past few days has brought the spearers out in force, and vestorday hundreds of them were at mer, because they are very wide awake. The meadows, too, are so swampy that it is almost and as the Hackensack pends are almost all shallow and the wily eels usually stay in the centre, the difficulty of getting them on the spear points is readily understood.

At present, however, both pends and meadows are frezen sufficiently hard to afford foothold, and the eels, some of them of great size, are lying torpid, concealed in the mad. They are so duil and lifeless that after they have been dragged to the surface, the only protest they enter against their rule awakening is, perhaps, a singgish, half-harted writhe. Often even that, is: lasking, and they go unresisting into the bag or basket of their captor, and, apparently, fall asleep again. The greater part of the spearing is done in pends within fifty yards of the river, between the Eric Railroad and Hackensack. The spearman, looks for a hole in the ice, and if he cannot readily find it he makes one; but the natural hole is the best because the eels seem to lie under it in larger numbers. Then he thrusts his spear deep into the mud. With almost every thrust he brings up one or more eels. Festerday, in about eight hours, Seth Gorbann of Carlatadt caught 105. If the cold continues the Hackensack may freeze sufficiently hard to afford more sport. and as the Hackensack ponds are almost all Carrier. The Pacific Mail steamship Newport, Capt. Shackford, had a four hours' test of her speed outside Sandy Hook yesterday afternoon, under the supervision of a Naval Board of Inder the supervision of a Naval Board of In-spection, composed of Capt. A. V. Cook, Com-mander Lyons, Lieut. Seabury, and Chief Engineer Magee. The object of the test was to find out whether or not the Newport came up to the requirements of the new postal sub-sidy law, under which a contract had been awarded to the Pacific Mail Company. She developed fifteen knots an hour, or one more knot than was necessary, and burned coal at the rate of about forty-five tons a day.
